Context of Glasgow Kelvin College

Glasgow Kelvin College is one of three colleges in the Glasgow College Region area with campuses based in the North and East of the city. Its catchment areas include the majority of the poorest and most deprived postcode areas in Scotland and some of the worst in the UK and Europe.

Our challenge lies in helping the people in these areas get the best access to opportunities through skills and learning. This is critical in ensuring that the Scottish economy recovers, grows and prospers. We do not under-estimate the extent of this challenge.

Glasgow Kelvin College offers a scale of delivery that is able to deploy the appropriate specialist expertise across the area to better tackle the scope and range of need. This will also create capacity for innovation and leadership in learner engagement, learning delivery and partnership working that will create a powerful force for learning as a driver of change and opportunity.

The Scottish Government directives sets out the context/policies for the college sector which highlights the role of skills and learning in helping individuals and communities realise the resulting economic and social benefits.

What is expected of a Board Member?

Individual Board members and Boards of Management must at all times conduct themselves in accordance with accepted standards of behaviour in public life. The Scottish Government has identified nine key principles, incorporating the 7 Nolan principles, as underpinning public life in Scotland:

- Duty/Public Service
- Selflessness
- Integrity
- Objectivity
- Accountability and Stewardship
- Openness
- Honesty
- Leadership
- Respect

All Board members should exercise their responsibilities in the interest of the College as a whole rather than as a representative of any constituency, including staff and student members. Board members should also be aware of their role as a Charity Trustee.

Guidance on the role of Board member can be accessed through the Guide for Board Members in the College Sector. In addition, any member must be aware of their responsibilities with respect to the Code of Conduct and Code of Good Governance, details on each are provided below.

Codes of Conduct for Members of Glasgow Kelvin College Board and Glasgow Colleges' Regional Board

The Scottish public has a high expectation of those who serve on the boards of public bodies and the way in which they should conduct themselves in undertaking their duties. Board Members must meet those expectations by ensuring good conduct as set out in the Codes of Conduct that apply to Members of the two bodies.

As a member of the Boards it will be your responsibility to make sure that you are familiar with, and that your actions comply with, the provisions of these Codes. Board Members must agree to abide by the terms of their appointment, which include abiding by the Code of Conduct.

You can access the Codes at: <https://www.glasgowkelvin.ac.uk/> and <https://gcrb.ac.uk/>.

Both bodies maintain a Register of Interests of members, which is publicly disclosed on their respective websites.

Code of Good Governance for Scotland's Colleges

Colleges in Scotland thrive in the heart of their communities, serving the interests of those communities, students, employers and other stakeholders. They have an essential and valuable role in Scottish society.

Colleges receive substantial public funding and also operate in an increasingly commercial and enterprising way. They are expected to innovate, pursue new opportunities and take measured risks in delivering what is best for their stakeholders.

Rightly, there is an expectation that colleges and those who are members of their boards of management will adhere to the highest standards of governance. The Code of Good Governance for Scotland's Colleges sets out the principles of good governance for colleges and promotes accountability and continuous improvement in how colleges are governed.

The overarching purpose of good governance for Scotland's Colleges is to:

- Lead the college and set its strategic direction and values
- Ensure effective management and financial controls to support the student experience within a framework of public accountability and transparency
- Deliver high quality learning and outcomes

The Code of Good Governance for Scotland's Colleges has been developed, and is owned, by the college sector. Colleges are required to comply with it as a condition of grant. It establishes standards of good governance practice for all college boards and provides the essential foundations for compliance within the legislative framework set out by the further and higher education acts.
